

Available to Meet: Advances in Professional Communications

Burt Swanson

UCLA

Abstract. I recount a recent professional email exchange supported by a personal assistant, which went wrong for all parties, from which I draw several lessons, identifying the problem of blinded agency in everyday digital communications, and suggesting that distinguishing between personal assistance with and without agency may be deeply problematic.

Keywords: professional communication, personal assistant, artificial intelligence